GEORGIA STATE UNIVERSITY LAW REVIEW

SELECTED 1988 GEORGIA LEGISLATION

INTRODUCTION

Little official history exists in Georgia to document legislative intent and to provide guidance in interpreting legislation. The sixty-two Georgia State University Law Review Peach Sheets contained in the following pages are intended to provide a source of legislative history. Over the past several years, members of the Georgia State University Law Review have analyzed the factors that legislators and lobbyists considered important in the introduction and passage of selected bills. The bills analyzed in the Peach Sheets were selected by the legislation staff after identifying those considered to be of particular interest to Georgia's legal community, to involve matters of public interest, or to be responses to controversial issues.

The Georgia State University Law Review Peach Sheets are intended to provide the reader with an accurate and complete picture of the reasons for a particular bill's enactment. Each Peach Sheet documents the history of a particular piece of legislation by identifying the reasons for the bill's introduction and the pressures brought to bear on the bill during its course through the legislature. When appropriate, public perceptions, as reflected in newspaper articles and public debate at the time the bill was being considered, are noted. The Peach Sheets contain research done through personal interviews and analysis of prior statutory and case law.

The members of the Georgia State University Law Review are proud to provide this service to the citizens of Georgia. We encourage those interested in Georgia legislation to forward suggestions and materials regarding legislative subjects to the Executive Legislation Editor, Georgia State University Law Review, Box 492, University Plaza, Atlanta, Georgia 30303-3098.
