COMMERCE AND TRADE

Selling and Other Trade Practices: Provide for Civil Remedies and Criminal Penalties in Cases of Intentional Theft While Engaged in Telemarketing, Internet, or Other Computerized Activities; Provide for Investigation and Enforcement Authority

CODE SECTIONS: O.C.G.A. §§ 10-1-393.5 (new), -399, 10-5B-6, 16-8-12 (amended)
BILL NUMBER: HB 1400
ACT NUMBER: 611
GEORGIA LAWS: 1996 Ga. Laws 231
SUMMARY: The Act addresses theft committed while engaged in telemarketing or activity on any computerized system that utilizes a computer and a modem. It provides for criminal penalties, as well as civil or equitable remedies by individuals. The Act authorizes double civil and criminal penalties for such unlawful activities targeted at elderly or disabled persons. Under the Act, telemarketing investigators are designated as certified peace officers, with all associated enforcement powers.
EFFECTIVE DATE: April 1, 1996<sup>1</sup>

History

Telemarketing fraud consistently ranks as one of the top three consumer problems in every state in the country.<sup>2</sup> Approximately $500,000,000 is lost to telemarketing fraud each year in Georgia.<sup>3</sup>

Prior to the passage of the Act, Georgia's laws provided criminal penalties for deceptive, fraudulent, or abusive telemarketing.<sup>4</sup> However, these provisions applied only in the context of charitable solicitations, securities, commodities, and certain utility contracting and plumbing activities.<sup>5</sup> The Secretary of State's Office and the Governor's Office of Consumer Affairs shared jurisdiction over these matters, and the Georgia Elder Consumer Action Program (GCAP) investigated telemarketing fraud against the elderly for possible civil action.<sup>6</sup>

The bill was a joint effort between the Secretary of State's Office and the Governor's Office of Consumer Affairs and was sponsored by Representative Sonny Watson.<sup>7</sup> It was intended to address the true scope of unlawful telemarketing activity, to provide penalties consistent with the severity of the offense, and to enhance enforcement mechanisms.<sup>8</sup>

Definitions

The Act amends the Fair Business Practices Act<sup>9</sup> by adding Code section 10-1-393.5.<sup>10</sup> The definition of an "unlawful, unfair, and deceptive trade practice" is expanded to include "any offense involving theft . . . while engaging in telemarketing or while engaging in any activity on the internet or any similar computerized system which individuals connect to by use of a computer and a modem."<sup>11</sup>

The Act defines "telemarketing" using the definition provided in the Code of Federal Regulations under the Telemarketing Sales Rule of the Federal Trade Commission.<sup>12</sup> For purposes of Georgia law, however, the definition adds telephone calls made in intrastate as well as interstate commerce.<sup>13</sup>

Remedies and Penalties

Previously, Code section 10-1-399 of the Fair Business Practices Act provided only for civil and equitable remedies for individuals injured by deceptive or unfair practices.<sup>14</sup> The Act amends this section and extends its scope to include remedies for violations of the new Code section, as well as violations of chapter 5B of title 10, the previously existing provisions that addressed deceptive, abusive, or fraudulent telemarketing.<sup>15</sup>

Prior to the passage of the Act, the only criminal penalties imposed were associated with violations of chapter 5B of title 10, which were punishable by a fine of not more than $50,000 and imprisonment for one to five years.<sup>16</sup> The Act toughens the criminal penalties in response to the “viciousness” of the fraudulent telemarketing activity that occurs in Georgia.<sup>17</sup>

The Act amends chapter 8 of title 16 of the Code, regarding criminal offenses involving theft, to provide these criminal penalties.<sup>18</sup> Violations of the new Code section, as well as violations of chapter 5B of title 10, are now punishable in the same manner as the theft of a motor vehicle or a motor vehicle part exceeding $100 in value.<sup>19</sup> Specifically, a first offense may be punished by imprisonment from one to twenty years, or in the same manner as a misdemeanor, at the trial judge’s discretion.<sup>20</sup> A second offense may be punished by imprisonment for three to twenty years, and a third offense for ten to twenty years.<sup>21</sup> No portion of these sentences may be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld.<sup>22</sup> The Act also subjects a person who intentionally targets an elder<sup>23</sup> or disabled<sup>24</sup> person to double the applicable civil and criminal penalties.<sup>25</sup>

Investigation and Enforcement

The Act requires that full- and part-time employees conducting telemarketing investigations be designated as certified peace officers.<sup>26</sup> These investigators must complete the training required for peace officers<sup>27</sup> and are then fully empowered to enforce the new Code section, including the power to execute search warrants and to carry firearms.<sup>28</sup>

This aspect of the Act is a response to the need for more effective and efficient investigation.<sup>29</sup> Cases of fraudulent telemarketing are difficult to investigate and had not been a high enough priority for criminal authorities to dedicate resources necessary to combat the problem.<sup>30</sup> As peace officers, telemarketing investigators can conduct both civil and criminal investigations simultaneously and can forward cases that warrant criminal action to the District Attorney.<sup>31</sup>
